

Chase Padusniak holds a B.A. summa cum laude from the College of the Holy Cross (2015) and an M.A. from Princeton University (2017). He expects to receive his PhD in English Literature from Princeton in 2023. His doctoral dissertation focuses on the intersection of medieval mystical writing with social imagination and political action. While completing his graduate studies, he has worked as an editor, screenwriter, lecturer, and tutor with a demi-decade of experience in education and archival research. Chase lives in the unparalleled state of New Jersey with his wife Gabby, two cats, two dogs, and a betta fish named Nermal.
