

Wayne K. Green Bio

Wayne Green is the inaugural CEO of FASPE. A South African born Australian, Wayne moved to New York to complete an Australia Federal Government Endeavour Executive Fellowship based on research and professional development in youth and young adult programming and service delivery. As a previous Executive Director of an international educational non-profit focusing on Jewish youth philanthropy, Wayne led the organization to create new curriculum, tools and resources to build the future of strategic grant makers and change agents. Wayne has significant experience in non-profit management and social impact with a global footprint in the United Kingdom, Australia, USA and Israel. With an undergraduate degree in Occupational Therapy, Wayne has a commitment and passion to support individuals, organizations and communities to engage in meaningful activities and find purpose for a better world.

Wayne continues to be an advocate for change having helped create the first Jewish LGBTQ Donor Network as well as support philanthropic efforts from individuals and giving circles. Wayne has held board positions on various non-profit organizations as well as an active participant on various fellowship programs focusing on identity formation, educational advancement and community building.