

Mia Garcia attended Baruch College where she studied psychology before starting her career in the nonprofit sector. Over the last decade, she has worked in project management and event coordination, focusing on increasing office productivity and community engagement. She enjoys planning events and bringing communities together through local and international outreach, both through work and for her church on Long Island where she actively serves with her husband. In 2012, together with her family, she organized and completed a missions trip in the Philippines where she was born, in the town of Pagasa (hope). They provided food for families and shoes for barefoot children. She lives in Westchester with her husband and their cat Graysie.