

Mia Garcia is an experienced professional who began her career in the nonprofit sector after studying psychology at Baruch College. With over a decade of experience, she has excelled in project management, office administration, and event coordination, with a strong focus on enhancing productivity and fostering community engagement. Mia thrives on planning impactful events that unite diverse communities through local and international outreach efforts, both in her professional role and as an active member of her church on Long Island, where she serves alongside her husband.

Mia lives in Westchester with her husband and their cat Graysie.