

Rebecca Scott holds a Bachelor's degree in English literature from Louisiana State University and a Master's degree in Holocaust & Genocide Studies. After completing her graduate studies at Kean University, she worked as an Academic Specialist for the Master of Arts in Holocaust & Genocide Studies program, overseeing the staging of workshops, lectures, conferences, and events featuring internationally recognized leaders in the field, as well as planning the first multi-national study delegation to sites of former genocide.

Before joining FASPE as Program Manager, she worked in higher education as an editor, project manager and lecturer. She has taught a wide variety of history and writing courses, and designed several courses on genocide, human rights, and the history, literature, and philosophical implications of the Holocaust.

She resides in New Jersey with her husband and two cats
